DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1, 14, 18, and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Hirt (US 2002/0010486 A1).

Hirt discloses a device for removing calculi having dual concentric probes. The outer probe is an ultrasonic probe driven by an ultrasonic horn and transducer. The inner probe is driven electro-magnetically to reciprocate to impact the calculi. Both of the probes are hollow and allow for aspiration of calculi particles therethrough. The abstract indicates that there is a switch (driving control device) which can change which probe is individually actuated by the appropriate drive circuitry. One circuit- 9-13 operates to activate the ultrasonic probe. The other circuit would be that inherent in an electromagnetic drive or rendered obvious. As disclosed in col. 21, it is clear that the two probes can be manufactured as different subassemblies, further indicating that the two probes are driven independently of each other. Suction port 19 communicates with the inner lumen of outer probe. See para. 12, 13 and 15.

Art Unit: 3731

Hirt teaches wherein the inner probe (20) is disposed within the outer probe (8) so that one probe lies coaxially within the other. This structure clearly overlaps the instantly claimed cylindrical-shaped tube structure divided in the longitudinal direction. Dividing a cylindrical tube lengthwise into an inner and outer cylinder along the longitudinal axis forms two coaxial tubes.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

5. Claims 28 and 31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hirt (US 2002/0010486 A1) in view of Du et al. (US 2004/0127925 A1).

Hirt discloses the invention as claimed with the exception of the output setting units. However, Du discloses that it was known to provide a generator which can drive the actuator at desired frequencies ([0011]). It would have been obvious to provide a variable generator for both drive signals in order to tailor the movement of the probes to the specific calculi being disintegrated.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments, filed 05/09/2008, with respect to the drawings objection, the specification objection, and the 35 USC 112 rejection have been fully considered and are persuasive. The objections and rejection have been withdrawn.
